

voestalpine Klangwolke Production Team: Openings for Quadrocopter Ground Personnel and Signal Flag Crew Members

(Linz, August 3, 2012) The preparations for the voestalpine Klangwolke on September 1st are moving full speed ahead. Now, we're recruiting volunteers to join the Klangwolke production staff: assembling LED suits and electronic components, performing maintenance routines on airborne robots, or manning signal flags as part of the Klangwolke choreography. The respective workshops are held every Tuesday in August at 10 AM, 2 PM and 6 PM in the Ars Electronica Center. As a token of our thanks for their public-spiritedness, volunteers will receive free passes to the Ars Electronica Center and Ars Electronica Festival T-shirts. Participants will also enjoy complementary beverages courtesy of Brau Union. If you have questions or want to register, please call 0732.7272.783 or send an e-mail to klangwolke@aec.at.

Costume Construction & Electronics Workshops

These two workshops are for those who'd like to lend a hand constructing illuminated costumes. And we're also looking for a few handymen and –women who can do a bit of soldering on some tricky SMD components.

Quadrocotper or Choreography Workshops

Quadrocopter workshops are just the thing for techies who'd like to join the ground maintenance crew of a squadron of flying robots. Men and women who have the gift of a highly developed sense of rhythm are in for a rewarding experience at the Choreography workshop in conjunction with the signal flag alphabet. NOTE: Workshop participation entails attending several rehearsals. But successfully completing them puts you in the middle of the action on September 1st as a member of the voestalpine Klangwolke production crew.
