

Sounds like Universe

May 26, 2010, 7-8:15 PM

Ars Electronica Center, Deep Space

(Linz, April 19, 2010) Musikschule Linz and the Ars Electronica Center cordially invite you to experience an extraordinary concert on May 26, 2010 at 7 PM. Students and teachers involved in the music school's Sound Workshop will perform pieces by Arvo Pärt, Karl Heinz Stockhausen, Marin Marais and others, accompanied by stellar nebulae, moons, planets, suns and galaxies swirling in High Definition through Deep Space. Admission is free of charge. So that we're able to provide 3D glasses to everyone in attendance, we respectfully request that guests RSVP via e-mail to maria.seidl@aec.at.

Experiment for Musicians and Audience Members

"We're really looking forward to attempting this here," said Christian Denkmaier, director of Musikschule Linz. "After all, where else could the Sound Workshop give a concert at which the musicians and their instruments—piano, violin, dulcimers, recorders and laptops—are situated amidst a three-dimensional stage set?" Gerfried Stocker, artistic director of the Ars Electronica Center, is just as enthusiastic: "This is the first time we're staging a concert like this in Deep Space. And I'm especially pleased about the great working relationship we've developed with the Sound Workshop in producing this experiment."
