

Family Days at the Ars Electronica Center

Saturday & Sunday, February 16-17, 2013 / 10 AM-6 PM

(Linz, February 13, 2013) The accent is on discovering, learning and having fun together as a family group this weekend at the Ars Electronica Center. Family Days on February 16-17, 2013 will feature high-energy tours of the AEC's exhibits. At Deep Space LIVE Family, Linz photographer Florian Holter will present images and experiences gleaned during the course of his international project "Bring a smile to our world."

Family Tour

Saturday & Sunday / 11:30 AM & 3:30 PM both days

The Family Tour begins with an entertaining and informative tour of the Ars Electronica Center, a presentation that also raises some thought-provoking questions about our future. For instance, how can we best configure our coexistence with robots. Or whether, in five years, we'll already be able to turn out a new pair of sneakers at home on a 3D printer.

Deep Space LIVE Family: A Smile Travels around the World

Sunday / 2 PM

"Bring a smile to our world" is the motto of a globe-spanning project by Linz photographer Florian Holter. For two years now, he's been traveling the world and documenting how people react when, in the midst of everyday life, they encounter someone wearing a red clown nose. At Deep Space LIVE Family on Sunday, February 17, Florian Holter will give an account of his experiences and present a selection of his most amusing, off-beat images.
